Meet Your Bartlett Arborist Representative

Bernard Demeo

Originally from Milford, Bernard carries a deep passion for the historic beauty of New England. While studying at the University of Rhode Island, Bernard developed an extensive knowledge of tree care. In addition to his course load, Bernard was accepted into URI's prestigious Coastal Fellows Program, where he conducted research on the effects of soil leaching into Narragansett Bay. In his summers away from college, Bernard worked as a pest management intern within the tree care industry. He came aboard at Bartlett Tree Experts after graduating from URI with a Bachelor of Science in Environmental Horticulture and Turf Grass Management. He first worked in Bartlett's Waltham office, perfecting his skills as a tree climber and plant healthcare technician. After years of field experience, Bernard specialized in creating disease management programs. In 2011, Bernard joined Bartlett's Beverly Farms office as their newest North Shore arborist representative. Through his education and years of expertise in the tree care industry, Bernard has gained a unique perspective for scientific tree management. Bernard is married to his incredible wife, Rachel, and is the proud father of his wonderful son, Charlie.
